Remembering Glenna by Evan Kramer

[The following was read at the memorial service for Glenna Lee Smith last Sunday.]

Glenna was our friend. She worked with us for the last year and a half at the Downtown Fun Zone. Now that she is gone, much of the fun is gone.

I felt like I've lived a charmed existence up to now. Never has someone so immediately close to me been taken away so quickly. I thought these things always happen to other people. Just a few weeks ago my mother died suddenly of heart failure. I feel even more hurt by the loss of Glenna who was so much a part of my everyday life.

On Wednesday, June 2, I was 43 years old. Valerie and I arrived at the store early and started working on Thursday's paper. When Glenna walked in she brought in a helium filled balloon. It said happy birthday. She led Valerie in a round of the happy birthday song and gave me a card she had made on her computer. We each got a cupcake which we ate. It was a great way to start the day and once again I thank you Glenna for remembering.

Glenna talked a lot about her family. Enough that I knew quite a bit about them but more importantly I also knew how much she loved them. At times she spoke about her father who she said she never wanted to disappoint. She spoke about Wendi and her three granddaughters Melissa, Sheri and Jessi. Her son Ben and daughter-in-law Myndee are expecting a baby and Glenna joked to several people about the fact Ben was expecting a baby. She talked about her mother Donna and her sister Dee all the time. Glenna loved her family as much as a person can.

Many people have stopped in and spoken about Glenna since that Wednesday afternoon. For many people she was the first person they had contact with when they moved here and started banking. Her actions reassured people and also the fact she remembered and knew people's names made them feel good. The hundreds of people who came in contact with her at our store had a mutual admiration society going with Glenna though every once in a while she'd pull me aside and tell me certain ones were "special people". That will kind of be our little secret now.

Glenna was proud of her Scottish heritage. She mainly showed this around the store with her thrifty attitude. She subscribed to a newsletter called the Tightwad Gazette which she used to let me read. I think she couldn't understand why I kept dropping my saver shields on the floor or throwing them away or not eating the food I'd brought to work.

Glenna really loved and got a lot out of her dog Murphy and cat Squeakers. She told us about Murphy chewing up the pillow and how he would head straight for Olie's sheep pasture everytime he was let out of the house. We heard about Murphy's sad look when Glenna had to leave for the day.

Glenna had gotten herself a computer a while back and she dove into it with passion. Before she got the computer she used to take some of the older movies home that no one paid attention to and watch them. When she found a really good one she'd get people to check it out. Glenna got really involved with whatever she was doing. After she got her computer she would go home at night and play Mah Jong or make a card or a banner. She really enjoyed making cards for people and just recently made a birthday card for me to send to my mother.

Glenna filled many roles in life and at work. Besides doing so many things at our business she proof-read the newspaper before we printed it. I think she was my biggest fan. She always found something to laugh about when she read my article and something positive to say about it. I'm going to miss that a lot.

The main thing I keep thinking about was how good Glenna made other people feel. She was happy and joked with people and knew their name and listened to them. We could all absorb some of

From the Mailbag

Have you heard about the marine biologists who became concerned about the decline and scarcity of abalone?

They took into consideration abalone having no natural defenses against predators and decided to cross breed abalone and crocodiles to produce a new species - an abodile. However, something went awry and they wound up with a crockobaloney.

Farewell

by Valerie Jean Kramer

We loved you while we had you,
And miss you now you're gone.
You wouldn't want us to be sad,
I know you'd say, "Be strong."

It's awfully hard to lose you.
God knows how hard I've tried.
But often thinking of you,
I must admit I've cried.

You set us an example,
Of the best that we should be;
Helping others, loving all,
And living joyfully.

Your death may be forever,
Your body now is gone.
But the love and joy you gave us,
Is inside us and lives on.

Drawing Workshop

The still-life drawing workshop with Janet Pretti, has been postponed one week, to June 19. The workshop consists of five sessions. They will be held on June 19, 26, July 10, 17, and 24 from 10:00am - 1:00pm.

The workshop will be held at the Steelblue Chameleon Lodge as part of the Tawanda Center for Art and Earth Studios. The Lodge is located 6.5 miles up the Elk River from Highway 101.

Basic drawing techniques will be introduced in the first three sessions. Emphasis will be placed on developing individual styles in the final two sessions. The cost for the workshop is $35. For more information and to pre-register call the instructor, Janet Pretti, at 332-1325.

Letter to the Editor

At a time like this it is always so very difficult to put into words what you are feeling.

Words seem so empty and meaningless, but we just wanted the family of Glenna Smith to know we all share in their loss. Our thoughts and prayers are with you.

Glenna was the kind of person who touched everyone she met in such a special way. She radiated such warmth and love for life. It was impossible to stay in a bad mood when you were in her company. If, for whatever reason you were blue, all it took was a few words from Glenna or one look at that wonderful smiling face and before you knew it, whatever brought you down wasn't so bad anymore.

I personally feel privileged to have known her, as I'm sure so many people do.

We'll miss her, but I feel sure Glenna is now in a far better place. Knowing Glenna she's making the angels smile even now as we miss her so much.

We Love You Glenna

I want to write something fine about my sister but I can't find the words that are as fine as she was. Glenna died suddenly yesterday afternoon as she was on her way home to let Murphy out and grab a little late lunch. Something terrible happened. We don't know what. Something — or someone, God help them — caused her to swerve suddenly and violently and the car tore out of control along a line of trees, ripping away branches and metal. When it came to a stop, she was dead.

Just like that.

The whole thing probably didn't take any longer to happen than it takes to read that first paragraph. I've been living those last seconds with her and I know she didn't have time to be afraid. She had time to know she was in trouble but mostly she was reacting. Had she survived to look back on it, she'd have remembered that every color and shape was incredibly vivid and sharp and every cell in her body was totally aware of life.

In the moment that awareness was wiped out, each of our lives changed forever.

Glenna was truly one of those people who made the world a little bit better for having lived in it. I know this because, with the dawn lifting in the sky outside my window, I can see the world isn't as full and rich a place as it was when the day began yesterday.

She went through life giving instead of taking, caring instead of hating, healing instead of hurting. She shared endlessly of the love we needed from her and always worried that she wasn't sharing enough.

She was a much nicer person than I am, but I'm a nicer person for having known her.

Some people can be like sisters in a special way that only friends can manage. Other people can be like friends in a special way that only sisters can manage. Glenna had that rare quality of being both and, dear God, I miss her.

I know You know what You're doing, Lord. I also know You understand when I say I hate what You did this time. But it's good that You let us see that someone else who knows how to show love had already placed flowers where she died when we came by just hours later. So how can I help but thank You with all my heart for the time we were given.

those qualities and it would make our world a better place to live in.

I've often heard of people referred to as irreplaceable. Since all of us are unique there's truth in that sentiment. But with Glenna I feel a big hole in my life because she was so unique and irreplaceable. Glenna was very down to earth and I don't know if she appreciated her specialness. She did what she did because she was that way, not as part of a master plan. God were we lucky to have Glenna for as long as we did.

Thank you also Glenna for putting up with my mutterings and rantings about this one and that one. I wasn't inhibited about expressing my likes and dislikes to Glenna. She listened to me and she also helped calm Valerie and I down when we were going at it. It's funny thinking about the many times when I would ask Glenna to do something at the store she would remind me I was the boss and it was okay to tell her to do something. I always felt Glenna contributed more to making the place go than I did. Through it all we worked together pretty darn well.

I am going to miss the sound of Glenna's car. I knew when she'd gotten to work or back from lunch from the sound the car which needed a muffler. Even now I keep listening for the sound of her car.
