A Walk In The Neighborhood By Evan Kramer

The neighborhood in this story is the human neighborhood and it stretches for thousands of miles.

A bright and energetic woman by the name of Theresa del Rosario is on a very long walk south and passed through Port Orford last Thursday afternoon. The walk she is taking started in Anchorage, Alaska on May 12, 1996, which just happened to be Mother's Day. The 33 year old resident of Minneapolis, Minnesota is now 2,800 miles along the way. She began the walk with another woman named Sherry Engel but due to foot problems Sherry had to stop walking and left at Chahallis, Washington. Theresa's friend Paul from Minneapolis walked with them both from Seattle and Theresa from Chahallis to Newport but left the walk then, leaving her to do it alone.

Theresa's destination is Buenos Aires, Argentina, which she hopes to reach in two years. She's going to stay on Highway 101 and Highway 1 as she walks through California. She plans to cross the California/Mexico border on about January 30 and walk down to the tip of Baja, California before taking the ferry from La Paz to the Mexican mainland and continue her walk. When's she walking and not talking to people like me she averages 3 miles an hour.

I met up with Theresa on a damp, rainy Friday morning just as she started walking out of the campground at Humbug Mountain State Park. She had spent the evening as a guest of the camp hosts at the park in their dry and warm trailer and was very appreciative.

She pulls her clothing, food and other supplies in a unique, handmade metal two wheel cart that was designed by her father. When fully loaded it weighs up to 100 pounds. She has a harness attached to it that goes around her waist.

I asked her about people's treatment of her and she said during the first six months of her walk she had only had three instances of rudeness. She had a lot more stories about the kindness and generosity of people along her trip who had never met her before.

I was interested in what the purpose of the walk was. She emphasized that it was to show that people can do anything, to not limit yourself but be aware of the consequences of your actions. She said she had been told it wasn't safe for a woman to take this walk. She says it should be safe for a woman whether she's in her home or on a walk on the road. She said maybe someone else will be inspired by this walk and take their own walk. Theresa hands out a card where The Walk is described as "increasing awareness of women's and children's right to good health and safety-every step of the way.

Theresa lived in the Philippines for six years and spent four of those years as a Peace Corps volunteer. Sherry Engel is a registered nurse. She was and is concerned with publicizing health care inequities during the walk.

Theresa told me she had gone through five pairs of walking shoes in the first part of the trip. She said she was wearing Clark's of England walking shoes. They are one of the many sponsors of the walk. Theresa likes wearing their shoes because they make them in different widths (remember that) as well as lengths and fit properly.

After Theresa leaves Mexico she will continue walking through the western edge of Central American including the countries of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, and then into the South American countries of Columbia, Ecuador, Peru and Machu Pichu, Chile and then finish in Buenos Aires on the east coast of Argentina. She expects by the time she

101 Trees By The Sea

The "101 Trees by the Sea" and Gold Beach city Christmas tree lighting ceremony takes place at Gold Beach City Hall at 5:30pm, Saturday, November 30. It is followed by a celebration at Docia Sweet Hall at 6:00pm. The evenings special guest, Santa Claus, looks forward to hearing children's wishes. Each child receives a surprise. Hot chocolate, spiced cider and cookies will be available to all.

The Gold Beach High School Band will perform seasonal tunes and lead in a community sing. Come join in the festivities!

Dock Report by Evan Kramer

The main activity for the early part of the month of November at the Port of Port Orford centers around salmon season.

On Thursday afternoon I drove down to the dock and spoke with David Barnes. He is an employee of the Port of Port Orford and was operating the boat hoist this day. He told me 16 boats were out fishing for salmon. I asked him what the limit for the salmon fisherman was and he said there wasn't one. He said some boats would be bringing in up to 30 salmon.

Dave told me there had been an accident earlier between two fishing boats, one skippered by Joe Andrews and the other by Bill Cobb. Andrew's boat was damaged including heavy damage to the mast.

An employee of the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife was working the dock. She was waiting for the boats to arrive and start taking samples off the bar codes embedded in the salmon heads to determine which river they are from.

Barnes said the start of crab season is December 1. The dock is now crowded with crab pots. This is about as photogenic a scene as you'll witness in Port Orford. Fishermen will load their boats with crab pots and are allowed to place them in the water on Thanksgiving Day morning, November 28, but not harvest the first dungeness crabs of the season until December 1. Estimates are that over 8,000 crab pots will crowd the dock by opening day. Each fishing boat uses different colored floats and each float is numbered. Some fishermen even attach numbers to the pots themselves. Now get those nutcrackers ready.

Junior Olympics

On November 23 Lane Neely, Mark Welsh, Kellen Siciak, Shawn Lang and Peter Welsh from Langlois and Port

Orford qualified at the Region XIII Cross Country Championships held at Philomath, Oregon and are now eligible to participate in the National Junior Olympic Championships held at Lexington, Kentucky on December 14, 1996.

All five runners run for the Southwestern Oregon Sizzlers, a running club composed of young athletes from throughout the southern part of the state. Neely, Mark Welsh, Siciak and Lang will be competing on the Youth Division Sizzler team at Nationals. They were on the second place team at the regional meet, narrowly being defeated by a strong team from Seattle, Washington. Peter Welsh will be running independently in the Midget Division.

All five runners must now find financial backing and sponsorship to cover the expenses of their trip.

Contributions may be made to the Blanco Booster Club.

Skulduggery in Curry County! by Midge Hayes, President of the Port Orford Friends of the Library

For more than 30 years, Oregon's enormously talented Kate Wilhelm has been writing fiction, and has developed a rabidly keen readership. Science fiction/fantasy has been her major genre. Where Late The Sweet Bird Song, in 1976, is perhaps her most highly acclaimed work and then in 1982, Oh, Susannah!, an off-beat, delightful mystery, was the breakthrough between the SF and MYS labels on her books. Several of her novels straddle the two genres: Smart House, in 1989, for instance. Even when the books are solid mysteries, with all the classic whodunit elements in place, there are sometimes strong "otherworldly" aspects, echoing her SF tolerance for the apparently inexplicable.

This is true even for her Barbara Holloway series (which deserves to be read in order, by the way), in which the heroine is a Eugene lawyer. These novels are solidly in the currently popular courtroom style of John Grisham, Scott Turow and Nancy Taylor Rosenberg. Won't someone please point out how much these authors owe to Earle Stanley Gardner, but better, since they take place in Oregon.

In fact, her latest book, Malice Propense (that second word means premeditated) is set not only in Oregon, not only in Eugene where the author lives, but in Curry County with special emphasis on Port Orford and even the Elk River Road! She has several mentions of Gold Beach, too.

Senior Report By Mary Yoder

Here's how I'll start - November 21 - was a Rotary luncheon, the volunteers were Norma Ellis, Betty Harper, Marge Kyle, Thelma Lagace, Lorraine Hass, Roald Young and what's his name doing dishes and clean up.

June Dennison set up tables, etc. You wonder why they all work so hard - this is what pays the bills - bless em.

November 23 the luncheon - rummage sale - and dance - what a luncheon - the turn out was super - had to put people in both rooms - those working, cooking and planning were Clair Stahl taking care of all the money - Peggie Stahl coffee and tea - Betty Harper - Norma Ellis - Lorraine Hass - June Black - Greta Carver - Bessie Laursen - Marge Kyle - doing the cooking. They couldn't have done it more tasty. June Dennison set up the tables - what's his name - mashing potatoes was told he helped with the gravy also - guess who did the dishes - Dick Clothier and Lee Hyle.

The rummage sale was free - lots of rummage gone - Henry Kron and what's his name really did a good job. Next the potluck lunch Saturday November 30 at 11:30am. You all come - bring my favorite dish - OK? You know after the luncheon Saturday November 23 - there was a talk and slide show given by a man from the Elk River Hatchery - everyone learned something from it - I hope we can have it again soon.

Before I go any further - I'd like to say thank you to the Sea Breeze flower shop for the very nice flower arrangement they gave to the Senior Center.

Now going into December - the birthday party is Sunday December 1 at 2:00pm - all are welcome birthday or not - December 8 is the breakfast - 8:00am to 1:30pm good food all you can eat - best come. December 14 Saturday is luncheon and rummage sale.

Nearly missed one December 2 - Monday night is pinochle - don't forget presents for the kids - the center will be closed November 28 & 29 - no van. Hope you all have a wonderful Thanksgiving and now this "The only way to have a friend is be one."

Letter to the Editor,

On Monday night, Nov. 18th, during the height of our last storm, the American Red Cross opened a shelter at the American Legion Hall, Port Orford.

The Red Cross now has a presence here in the form of a Disaster Action Team headed by Ed & Joyce Waters of Port Orford. The team is prepared to offer relief to victims of disaster here in our area.

In the near future, the Red Cross will be offering training in Port Orford in First Aid, CPR, and courses relating to disaster relief.

Our many thanks for the cooperation of the American Legion for the use of their Hall, Dottie Myers, City Mgr. For her support, Frank Smith for his offer to prepare food at the Port & Starboard, and the Shoreline Motel for housing some of our disaster victims on short, late notice.

Electronic Rust by Valerie Jean Kramer

'Tis the season of winter storms which bring rain, wind, and power problems. Actually, you should worry about power all year long. The National Power Laboratory estimates that in Curry County we can expect about 7,000 power problems a year! Problems range from little blips you can't even see to multi-day power outages. When these glitches hit your computer, they can cause it to lock up, scramble data, or burn out components. Even worse, some of these problems can act like "electronic rust" accumulating to cause future computer failures.

A spike, or transient, is a very brief pulse of very high voltage. The voltage may be several thousand volts but only for a thousandth of a second or less. You won't even know it happened unless you are watching with special laboratory equipment. They can be caused by nearby lightning strikes or when a large load (such as a pump, air conditioner, electric heater, hot water heater, etc.) is switched on or off. To your computer it looks like a miniature lightning bolt.

A surge, or overvoltage, is when the voltage, normally 120V, increases slightly for a brief period. The voltage may rise 5, 10, 20 volts or more but significantly less than the thousands of volts in a spike. It may last for 1/20 of a second to a few seconds but significantly longer than the instantaneous spikes. You may see the lights flicker. Surges can cause electronic devices to burn out from overload. Surges are caused by large load changes or switching done by the power companies.

A sag, or brownout, is the opposite of a surge. The voltage can drop to as low as 80 volts although 100-115V is much more common. You may see the lights flicker. Sags are commonly caused by electric motors starting or by faults on the power company's lines. Sags are very likely to cause computers to crash and lose data since a computer can't work without power. They can also cause overheating and premature failure in electric motors.

Outages or Blackouts are when the power disappears completely. Most computer users have a tale to tell of the work they lost when the power went out and they hadn't saved their document. Outages are usually caused by a failure in the utility company's distribution system. (Wind, rain, ice, auto accident, tree limbs, etc. causing downed lines.)

The good news is that you can protect yourself against any or all of these conditions. There are several types of devices, each designed to protect against various power problems.

A "surge suppressor" offers some protection against spikes (but not much against true surges.) (Watch out for rip-offs with names such as "surge stick" that actually offer no power protection at all!) Surge suppressors are usually based on MOV devices (Metal Oxide Varistor). MOV's look like a yellow ceramic quarter with two wires attached to it. They can be wired directly across the power line and, under normal conditions, appear to do nothing. If the voltage exceeds a certain threshold their resistance varies (varistor) and they begin to conduct, shorting out the high voltage. In the voltage lasts more than a very brief time, they may burn out leaving you with no protection.

Better surge suppressors include capacitors, toroidal coils and other devices to help block the spikes before they get to the MOV and to remove RFI/EMI noise from the power. (Radio Frequency Interference/Electro-Magnetic Interference) Some units also have connections for your telephone line to protect your modem or fax machine.

To be sure you get a good unit, look for the Underwriter Labs (UL) 1449 certification. You also want a light that clearly identifies whether the protection is still working or not. Don't forget to protect other expensive electronic equipment such as your satellite receiver, TV, Stereo, Laser Printer, Copy Machine, Fax Machine, etc. I highly recommend the "Isobar" and "Isotel" products from TrippLite and we have a variety of sizes in stock at The Downtown Fun Zone.

A Line Conditioner is a device, often just a large, heavy transformer, that will offer protection against spikes, surges, and sags. Although these devices used to be popular, they are less common having been replaced for the most part by UPS's.

A UPS (Uninterruptable Power Supply) is a device that can solve all power problems. It includes MOV's for spike protection and it may include a transformer for voltage regulation. UPS's also include batteries (and an automatic charger) which kick in to provide power if the line power fails. Although you can buy very large UPS's, most people select one with a 400-720VA power rating. This is sufficient to power a computer for 5-50 minutes giving you enough time to ride out short outages and to save your work and power off your equipment without loss if power isn't quickly restored by the electric company.

Although Tripp-Lite makes a series of UPS's, I believe the products manufactured by Best Power offer a superior value and those are the ones we carry at The Downtown Fun Zone.

Do I believe in these devices? You bet! All of our computers are protected by UPS's as is our TV/Stereo at home. (sure is nice to keep watching a movie if the power blips off for a second instead of trying to get a tape unstuck from a jammed VCR!) Likewise our laser printer, etc. are protected by Isobar surge suppressors.

It's never too soon to start protecting your equipment and right now, at the start of the winter storm season, is a particularly good time to consider whether you are adequately protected!

X-rays via Phone Lines

In its first ever teleradiological transmission last month, Curry General Hospital whisked images from a local patient's CT scan to a radiologist's office in Medford. It was easy as clicking a computer mouse and just as fast, announced William "Al" Nickerson, MD, hospital administrator.

A close second to Star Trek's beam-me-up-Scotty technology, teleradiology allows the hospital to beam X-rays, ultrasound and other radiographic images to radiologists in urban medical centers hundreds of miles away.

"Teleradiology enhances our ability to provide the best clinical care possible to our patients 24 hours a day in this remote, rural area," says Nickerson. "There is no question that the technology will save all of us valuable time and money. It also has the effect of placing Curry General in a clinical partnership with major medical centers, just as if they were actually here."

Electronically dispatched over regular telephone lines, the transmissions take minutes. An instant radiological reading allows hospital medical staff to formulate a quick diagnosis and treatment plan that otherwise could keep anxious patients waiting several days and cost hundreds of dollars in specialized medical transport, "not to mention physical stress on the patient," Nickerson says.

"We can use teleradiology for all kinds of imaging," adds Sadie Hannah, RN, the hospital's director of clinical services. For example, a child is in a serious accident... We can do a CT scan of her head and send it to the trauma experts in Portland or Medford. No waiting.

"A pregnant woman is in distress. Is there a ruptured placenta? We have an instant answer with ultrasound and teleradiology," Hannah explains.

Teleradiology has many uses for Curry County patients, Hannah says. "We can get a specialist's immediate opinion on anything from cervical spine injuries to mammograms."

Teleradiology is not a new technology. In fact, it is the most widely used specialty in telemedicine, according to the American College of Radiology (ACR). "It has the potential to put a radiologist at the elbow of every physician and at the bedside of every patient," an ACR spokesman says.

Just Look At Me Now! By M. Alcott and B. Breuer

Have you noticed the change occurring in our community? We have.

Our town, noted for its natural beauty and historic nature, is cleaning, painting and fixing up its older homes, commercial and historic structures.

The Community Response Team (CRT) in this column, will feature a home, commercial or historical structure that has been improved, enhanced or maintained with loving hands. We will also try to give you the original date of construction and a bit of historical information. We hope you enjoy it.

This week we are featuring the home at the Port Orford Heads State Park. The home was constructed in 1934-35. It was the residence for the commanding officer of the Coast Guard and his family. Currently, it is rented by the state park team leader and his wife.

Upon entering the park, one's focus is immediately drawn to the house on the right.

The occupants have encircled the home with a splendid display of flowers and have received many compliments from visitors to the park throughout the summer and fall seasons.

The current lady of the house loves flowers and together with her husband produced this lovely enhancement with their own funds.

At this writing, the flowers are beginning to wane. Jack Frost has arrived. We are looking forward to next year's display.

Pig Bowl Sweatshirts

Youth Center Gets Heat

Terri Tronson, director of the North Curry Youth Center, informed the Port Orford City Council that the Youth Center building has no heat and winter was coming on with full force. She requested the City assist in restoring heat since the Center was in use for the children.

We are happy to report that as of Wednesday afternoon, November 20, both of the non functioning heaters have been replaced with new ones donated by Janelle Haller. We should thank the City of Port Orford, Frank Smith and Janelle Haller, all of whom contributed to the prompt repairs.

City of Port Orford

The city of Port Orford is seeking interested individuals to serve on the City of Port Orford Planning Commission. The planning commission is an advisory body to the Port Orford City Council concerning land use issues.

Any interested individuals should write to the Port Orford City Manager, P.O. Box 310, Port Orford, OR 97465. Indicate in your letter of application why you wish to serve on the planning commission. Applications are due at city hall by 5pm Thursday, December 5, 1996.

A Little Piece of Chicago

Soaker's coffee shop brings "A Little Piece of Chicago" to town with the musical talents of Roy Swanson and his daughter Melody. Tickets are $6.00 in advance for the Sat., Nov. 30, 8pm performance.

The following board members will continue in office until the 1999 elections.

- 2 Michael Knapp Floras Creek
- 3 Merrillyn Cuthbert Sixes
- 6 Shirley Van Loo Port Orford

If you are interested in running for one of these positions, now is the time to begin. Any time between December 1 and January 9, you must file your application with the Elections Department at the Curry County Courthouse in Gold Beach. You may either pay a filing fee of $10 OR have at least 25 registered voters sign a petition form. The forms are available free at the Elections Department or you can get a copy at The Downtown Fun Zone.

In some elections, such as the recent Port Orford City Council election, several candidates run for several seats and the candidate with the most votes gets the first seat, the candidate with the next most votes gets the second seat, etc. The School Board election is not like that. Instead, each candidate runs for a specific position. That is, when you submit your application to run, you must specify position 1, 4, 5, or 7. You may win or lose your bid for that position but you will not be in the running for any of the others.

If you have any questions, the folks at the Election Department are very helpful and willing to answer questions. You can reach them by calling 247-7041 and asking for the Elections Department.
