How Does Your Garden Grow? By Evan Kramer

The Port Orford City Council met on Monday night and the main topic of discussion was the business license for Creighton Plants and Supplies. Sunset Garden Club vice-president Frankie Sonetti read a statement to the council at the beginning of citizen's concerns. The garden club is protesting the non-renewal of the business license for Creighton Plants. The group is asking for the city council to "facilitate the renewal of Creighton's business license as they have renewed since 2001. Sonetti statement noted there had been "one complaint versus many letters of support from local citizens as well as residents adjacent to Creighton Nursery."

Resident Jack Morrill asked the council why it took eight years to find fault with the location of Creighton Plants and councilor Steve Abbott said it was a slip. Morrill asked why the council would close a business during an economic downturn and Abbott told him the planning commission should deal with this. What Abbott is referring to is that Creighton Plants could go to the Planning Commission and apply for a zone change which would enable them to operate the nursery. Nothing is guaranteed and the commission could either turn it down or approve it. The council at an earlier meeting voted to waive the fee if the Creighton's filed for a zone change.

Paula Cracas asked for clarification on the Creighton's being issued a business license eight years ago. Mayor Jim Auburn said their business had evolved from a home business to a commercial business and the city hadn't realized it was in a restricted zone. He said the city had offered them leniency to forgo the fees for a zone change. Auburn said there was no legal way to grandfather them in and the right thing to do is for them to apply for a zone change.

This situation is where it is today because the city received a complaint about the Creighton's operating a business in a residential zone. If the Creighton's were to file for zone change it would go before the planning commission which could make a decision. However, at this point the nursery will close on June 30.

City administrator Mike Murphy was asked about the plans for the library space but he said he wasn't ready yet what with City Financial officer Dave Johnson being out of town. By next week the library space will be vacant and over 2,000 additional square feet of space will be available for use by various city departments or other entities. Police Chief Mark Creighton in anticipation of the library move has already had a set of plans for the space drawn up which would have the police department moving into it. In addition there would be a large meeting room for use by all city departments.

Over 100 members of the LDS Church will provide a day of community service in Port Orford cleaning up our local parks on July 26. They will clean the ivy off the old city jail, clear overhanging branches out of the trees in the parks and do weed whacking. This community service day is in honor of Mormon Pioneer Day.

City council member and Port liaison John Hewitt spoke to the council about Oregon Solutions. This group working under the auspices of Governor Kulon-goski is looking for a solution to the shoaling problems at the Port of Port Orford. They brought four scientists to Port Orford to study the problem and their conclusion to solve the shoaling problem is to construct an east Jetty. This concept was widely talked about and proposed during the 1980's but the idea went nowhere. The Oregon Solutions group is also getting designs for a new cannery building with the next step finding the money to do something.

It was reported that at the council public works subcommittee meeting the city crew had many concerns about training and supervision.

Councilor Milton Finch made a motion for the council to approve the transfer of sick leave policy and it passed 6-0. This enables city employees who have used up all their sick and vacation leave to obtain sick leave from one of their co-workers if they need extended time off for an illness or injury.

Milton Finch made a motion for the council to adopt Resolution 2008-29 adopting the 2008-09 city budget in the amount of $3,185,815. It passed unanimously as well as Resolution 2008-30 adopting salaries and wages for city employees. The highest paid city employee is the police chief at $53,590 with the city administrator in second place at $47,215.

The council also passed Resolution 2008-32 imposing and appropriating taxes for the 2008-09 fiscal year. The general fund tax is $2.2688 per $1,000 of valuation and the local option levy for the police department is $1.41 per $1,000 of valuation. Resolution 2008-33 calling for an election within the city for the purpose of approving a local option tax levy for the police department passed on a motion to adopt by councilor John Hewitt. City voters will decide this issue at the November 4, 2008 general election.

The council went from public session into executive session under ORS 192.660(2) (f) exempt public records and (H) consult with legal counsel. When they returned to regular session councilor Steve Abbott made a motion to direct the city attorney to "proceed in the way we discussed in the executive session." It passed 4-2 with councilors David Smith, Abbott, John Hewitt and Bill McArdle voting yes and Milton Finch and Ed Beck voting no. The motion doesn't mean anything to those of you reading this and who were not at the executive session but at least the council understood its meaning though two disagreed with the intent. [Note: This attempt to keep the public from knowing their final decision is questionable at best and may well be illegal according to ORS 192.660(6) and 676.175(1). See page 143 of the 2008 Attorney General's Public Records and Meetings Manual regarding "coded terms".]

One thing we can all understand is that the town is looking better with the new library about to open and some major renovations going on to the former Battle Rock Garage being done by contractor Al Morse.

Letter to the Editor,

Your reporting created a clear picture of important events governing our little city. And thank you to the Planning Commission for inviting Michael Murphy, City Administrator, to address intelligent concerns about our shaky water supply.

We all know that Michael Murphy is our City Administrator, and as such, heads the day to day operations of our city -- with the exception of the police department.

In most small cities Michael would be called a "City Manager," have the final say, and make more money. But, Port Orford had a little "personality clash" with a former City Administrator, and it was decided that the police department would maintain more autonomy here.

We seem to be having difficulty with our city governance because of this divide. Perhaps it is time to re-think our prior decision and emulate many successful small cities in Oregon -- where the City Manager actually gets to manage the whole city with direction from the volunteer governing body -- the City Council. (Our Mayor only votes in a tie.)

These successful small cities also receive input from their citizenry through advisory or visionary committees. The League of Oregon Cities, sites numerous such cities, www.orcities.org.

There are so many creative people living here that such a group could easily unite and influence cooperative movement toward creating the city we say we want. (See a partial plan created in 2006 by over 200 citizens, city staff, and consultants -- "Looking to the Future.")

Michael Murphy is one of the best communicators I've ever met and has a great deal of knowledge. Our community deserves to hear from him on a fairly regular basis -- since he sees the big picture and has almost all of the answers. What he doesn't know he will find out because he is a whiz on his computer.

What I learned from the report is that our seriously aging water system is not quite at "rationing" level and not quite at "moratorium" level, but with a "tremendous water loss," of 50%, the picture is a little disturbing. Don't you think?

Especially in light of the legal posting on the back of the paper, asking the Planning Commission to consider two preliminary plats for two new subdivisions. Both "within the corporate limits of the city of Port Orford," and both represented by the same Attorney/Agent. The total number of lots is 39 -- all within the corporate city limits!

So thanks to the "gentleman of the press" from Port Orford Today for printing the honest and accurate information that our citizenry needs to make intelligent decisions for our future.

I completely support making money on real estate investments, and I have made bad real estate decisions in the past myself. But, we must assure current residents, especially our children and elderly, of a safe and healthy supply of potable water. Michael Murphy also stated that "the city needs a grant for an engineering study on raising the dam." There are talented wordsmiths amongst us who have a vested interest in our water supply -- a citizens' grant writing committee, working in concert with City Hall may help further our mutual interest.

Library Grand Opening

We hope everyone will find time to stop by the new Port Orford Public Library between 1:00 and 5:00pm on Saturday, July 5. This is the community's celebration—a time to feel great pride in knowing that by working together for over 7 years, we were able to build a very handsome, debt-free public library!

There will be the traditional ribbon cutting at 1:00pm, followed by a couple very short speeches about 2:00, and there will be some wonderful mementoes to put in your scrapbook. But mostly the grand opening is all about exploring your new library—as Dr. Seuss said, "Oh, the places you'll go!" And all of them are just grand. See you there!

Rotary Hears DSL Is Coming!

Brian Simms, Local Manager of Construction and Installation, Verizon, told Rotary members that his company will be installing a central station near the Downtown Fun Zone this Fall which will enable most Port Orford residents to access DSL service. People living within 17,000 feet (about 3½ miles) from the central station should be able to receive it.

Two DSL packages will be available according to Brian Simms: the faster 3 megabyte, and slower 768 kilobyte service. Although your phone line will be utilized to bring DSL to your home or business, it will not interfere with your phone service since DSL uses a higher frequency. Most DSL subscribers will receive a self-install package through the mail (including a router, modem and filters). The service is always “on,” like your telephone, therefore you need to have good antivirus security protection. The service works with Windows 98 or greater.

If you do not have a land line, you can still receive DSL through a “dry loop.” Cost of the service will be approximately $20 to $34.

Brian Simms explained that Verizon only services communities of 2500 or over. But it was the persistence and hard work of local Chamber of Commerce member, Ed McQuade, which encouraged Verizon to develop in a smaller market.

If you want to find out if you are within service range for Verizon DSL, you can call 1-800-483-1000, or go online to www.verizon.com.

Coast Baseball League representative, Kari Engdahl accepted a $200 donation from the Rotary Club of Port Orford to support that activity in our community. Kari reported that the kids have had a fun and exciting year, their first in the Gold Beach League. The donation will be used to purchase a ball pitching machine.

Stewardship Area

Port Orford Ocean Resource Team (POORT) launched their Stewardship Area Program during a meeting at the Community Building on June 18th. Over seventy people attended the event, representing State and Federal governments, resource agencies, conservation organizations and the public.

The Launch provided an opportunity to bring people together who are working, have projects, or have interests within the boundaries of the Stewardship Area. After POORT discussed their new program and provided information about the work they have accomplished to date, twelve topics in the areas of terrestrial work, fisheries management, and ocean science were presented to the group by each of the project leaders.

POORT recognizes that we need to better understand ocean ecosystems and human uses of the ocean, and believes place-based conservation offers the best hope for restoration of intact, resilient ocean ecosystems. It is out of this recognition that the Stewardship Area idea was born.

One goal of the Stewardship Area is to retain our community's historical access, use, and enjoyment of marine resources and the marine environment. POORT recognizes that to do this we have to promote sustainable use and work for improved sustainable fishing, ecological integrity and resilience, and productivity. Working toward this goal will include increasing public awareness regarding the existence of critical marine species and habitats in the region, protections already in place for those resources, and the need to steward them.

To date, implementing the Port Orford Stewardship Area has included three phases. In Phase One, POORT assembled information on what is currently known about the status of marine resources and the marine ecosystem in the Port Orford region and documented human uses of the ecosystem.

In Phase Two, POORT proposed the Stewardship Area as a framework for promoting sustainable use of local resources and sought input from fishermen about the boundaries and ecological and economic goals. The Stewardship Area encompasses the local traditional fishing grounds and continues upland into the watersheds.

The Launch was Phase Three and was intended to develop a line of communication between those concerned with our area both professionally and personally, and to share our interest in existing projects and working collaboratively in the future when it is appropriate.

The POORT office is open M-F and welcomes people to come by the office to learn more about this work. You can also check out the website at oceanresourcesteam.org.

Letter to the Editor,

On behalf of the Oregon Viper Club, I wish to thank Chief Creighton, Cpc. Boggs, and Officer Fink of the Port Orford Police Department for extending all courtesies they had at their disposal on June 14 during the club's trip through the local area, which departed from Portland, Oregon. I have received many thank you's from the club members describing Port Orford as the hi-spot of their whole trip.

There were twelve Vipers total and they rallied at my home on Hubbard Creek Road where we had snacks and photo ops, in which even a black bear participated.

Then we had a group photo shoot at Battle Rock Park before heading out on a ride down the beautiful Oregon Coast to Smith River, where we had lunch at the Ship Ashore Resort.

I also wish to thank Steve and Eve Thompson of "Studio B" for the superb photography and the professional manner in which they recorded the event. We hope to see the fruits of our effort in an upcoming issue of "Viper" magazine, a high quality international quarterly publication.

Thank you all, again,

The Avenger Part 3 By Lou Mincer

At least 11 corporations, both international and domestic, are prospecting for new wind sites in various states causing the demand for wind leases to proliferate all the way from the Canadian border to Great Falls, close to Circle Glendive, Baker and Ennis. Areas where alternative energy is produced, in many instances, are handicapped by lack of transmission lines. This impediment must be resolved. If these wires became a priority endeavor by the states, wind and solar energy would soon surpass and replace carbon, coal and other biological carbon causing fuels.

This alternative energy crusade has also picked up a head of steam in Montana. Yet, it remains miniscule in scope since they have only achieved several projects with short transmission runs on line under the helmship of the state's major utility, North Western Energy. In Colorado, fourth in the nation in solar power potential, also lacks transmission capability which they anticipate will cost $250,000.00 per mile to construct on flat land leading to urban centers.

Our vaunted Congress has been in a funk insofar as solving the nation's energy dilemma. They have the authority of facilitating the implementation of corridors for transmission extension but instead are mired in La La land, preoccupied with war and terrorism to the exclusion of all else.

Renewable energy and greenhouse gases are intimately interlinked. This relationship applies to cars, planes, homes and every existent device dependent on fuel consumption that are major carbon pollutants. There is no magic cure for carbon fuels, except alternatives primarily derived from wind, sun, geothermal, biomass, hydro, etc. that burn clean.

Keep it Safe

The Office of State Fire Marshal (OSFM), Oregon fire service, natural resource agencies, Oregon fireworks wholesalers and safety experts encourage Oregonians to keep it legal and keep it safe when using fireworks. The 2008 Oregon fireworks sales season opens today, June 23 and the OSFM and their partners want everyone to be aware of the type of fireworks legal in Oregon, where these fireworks are permitted and the simple steps everyone can take to increase fireworks safety.

“Legal fireworks may be purchased only from Oregon permitted fireworks retailers and stands,” advises State Fire Marshal Nancy Orr. “Regulations limit where those fireworks may be used. For example, fireworks are prohibited in all state parks, on all Oregon beaches, and in Federal parks and forests.”

Oregon law bans possession, use or sale of fireworks that fly, explode or travel more than six feet on the ground or 12 inches into the air. Fireworks commonly called bottle rockets, Roman Candles, and firecrackers are ILLEGAL in Oregon.

Under Oregon law, officials may seize illegal fireworks and fine offenders up to $500 per violation. Those who misuse fireworks or allow fireworks to cause damage are liable and may be required to pay fire suppression costs or other damage. Parents are also liable for fireworks damage caused by their children.

Steps to safer use of fireworks include:

- Be prepared before lighting fireworks: keep water available by using a garden hose or bucket.
- Be safe when lighting fireworks: keep children and pets away from fireworks.

• Be responsible after lighting fireworks: never relight a dud. Wait 15 to 20 minutes then soak in a bucket of water before disposal.

Fireworks Fire Safety

Fire “works” best this time of year, so take caution when using “fireworks” this Fourth of July. Many areas throughout Coos and Curry County have already shown signs of dry conditions. Grasses and other fast-burning fuels are already capable of posing a serious fire threat. The Coos Forest Protective Association reminds all residents to heed caution when celebrating with fireworks during the holiday weekend.

First, purchase fireworks from licensed Oregon outlets only. Devices that fly or explode are illegal under Oregon law. The use of fireworks is also illegal on all federal and state forestlands as well as many Oregon beaches.

While local public use restrictions have yet to be put into place, residents need to exercise caution when using fireworks. When young people play with fireworks, parents need to consider the liability risk along with their child’s safety.

The costs mount as the fire grows, and state law holds parents responsible for the actions of their children. This responsibility includes paying for fire suppression and property damage costs.

In addition to the potential for sparklers and related fireworks to ignite a blaze, other popular holiday activities pose risk. Campfires, cigarettes and off-road driving are common sources of human-caused fires.

Fire managers advise campers to keep an eye on your campfire at all times. Staying in a fire safe campground is the best way to have a safe and legal campfire. Before you leave your campsite, even for a few minutes, put the fire out. Just because you can’t see smoke doesn’t mean that the fire isn’t burning in the fuels, waiting for the chance to re-ignite when you’ve gone. People wishing to gain access to specific private lands should contact the landowner directly.

Campfires on the beach should be kept below the high tide line and out of driftwood piles.

Smoking in the forest can also lead to catastrophe. CFPA officials encourage the use of ashtrays inside your vehicle and remain in the vehicle while smoking a cigarette.

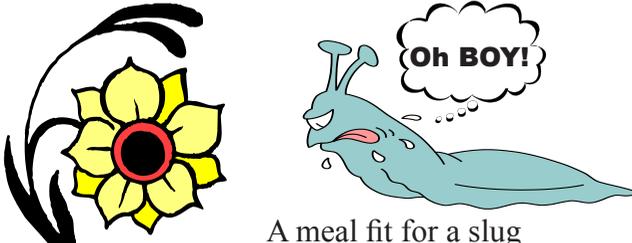

Off-road vehicle use can also spark a fire. Avoid driving in tall grass, and check the catalytic converter for signs of wear. A hanging muffler on a stationary vehicle can also reach temperatures high enough to ignite fuels on the ground. When you travel through the forest during the fire season, you should always carry a fire extinguisher and plenty of water.

Before heading to the woods for the Fourth of July holiday, contact CFPA or your local fire department for fire restrictions. To report a wildland fire, call 911. Remember, only you can prevent wild fires.

Jubilee Pet Show

The pet show is one of the most popular of the July 4 Jubilee events. This year it takes place on Saturday July 5, from 2:00-4:30pm, at 545 Tenth Street. This is in front of the Pet Pals dog grooming business and the street will be blocked off during the pet show. All kinds of pets are welcome.

Business Licenses

There has been some considerable confusion in our community about the business license/zoning issue surrounding a nursery business in Port Orford. I will attempt to clear up any misunderstandings, and try to show the way to a possible resolution of the situation. The City did issue business licenses for 8 years or so to this business. The City received a written complaint that the business was located in a residential zone, and was therefore out of compliance with the zoning code. After a complaint is filed, the City is duty bound to investigate the complaint. Having found that the complaint was correct, and that the business was indeed situated in a residential zone, the City Council took action to correct the situation.

First off, the City cannot knowingly issue licenses and permits in violation of City ordinances. Therefore, the decision was made (at a City Council meeting on March 17, 2008) to not renew the business license under the present circumstances, and to send a letter to that effect to the business owners. The proper way to correct the situation is to either relocate the business (not feasible), or change the zoning. It should be noted that the business is located immediately adjacent to commercial zoning. A zone change can be accomplished without affecting the zoning of any other properties. The easiest and most appropriate way to resolve the situation is to change the zoning of the location. The City Council, in recognizing the fact that the City had erred all those years, voted to waive the fees (also at the March 17, 2008 meeting) for the necessary zone change. All that is required to move the process forward is for the affected business owners to file a zone change application with the Port Orford Planning Commission. A public hearing on the proposed zone change is required, and that is the proper place for citizen testimony concerning the application. If the Planning Commission decision is unsatisfactory to the applicant, the right of appeal to the City Council comes into play. The City Council is the place where Planning Commission decisions may be appealed. The City Council would also hold a public hearing, and again, that is the proper place and time for citizen input on the zone change application. It is not appropriate for the City Council to circumvent the administrative process until that process has run its course. If administrative remedies fail, then is the appropriate time for the City Council, as representatives of the citizens, to step into and resolve the dispute. Any questions about the process may be directed to your City offices at 332-3681.

Love Monkeys In Parade
By: Paula Cracas

With the 4th of July just around the corner, the Port Orford Love Monkeys for Peace gathered to plan for the parade. This year we decided to invite folks to join us to march for peace. Of course, the Love Monkeys have marched for peace for the past five years, but this year, we figured the more the merrier. So all lovers of peace are encouraged to come on down and be part of the 4th of July parade. As usual there will be no signs for or against any candidate, political party, or any situation or condition in the world (for example the war in Iraq). In fact, only signs for peace will be welcomed. Your sign can say peace in any language. And you don't even have to have a sign as we have some to share or you can walk with us without one. Thanks to Delores we are near the beginning of the line, so you won't miss the parade. Peace in 2008. Isn't that an interesting concept?

Letter to the Editor,

Last night I saw the play "Steel Magnolias" at Theatre 101 here in Port Orford. I can't remember laughing so hard and also crying just a bit too, while watching a live performance.

We are truly blessed to have this live theatre here in Port Orford. The quality of acting is amazing and this is a touching and delightful play. So, if you haven't already seen it, you still have two more weekends. . . but don't forget to buy your tickets (only $10) in advance at the Fun Zone, as they were sold out last night.
